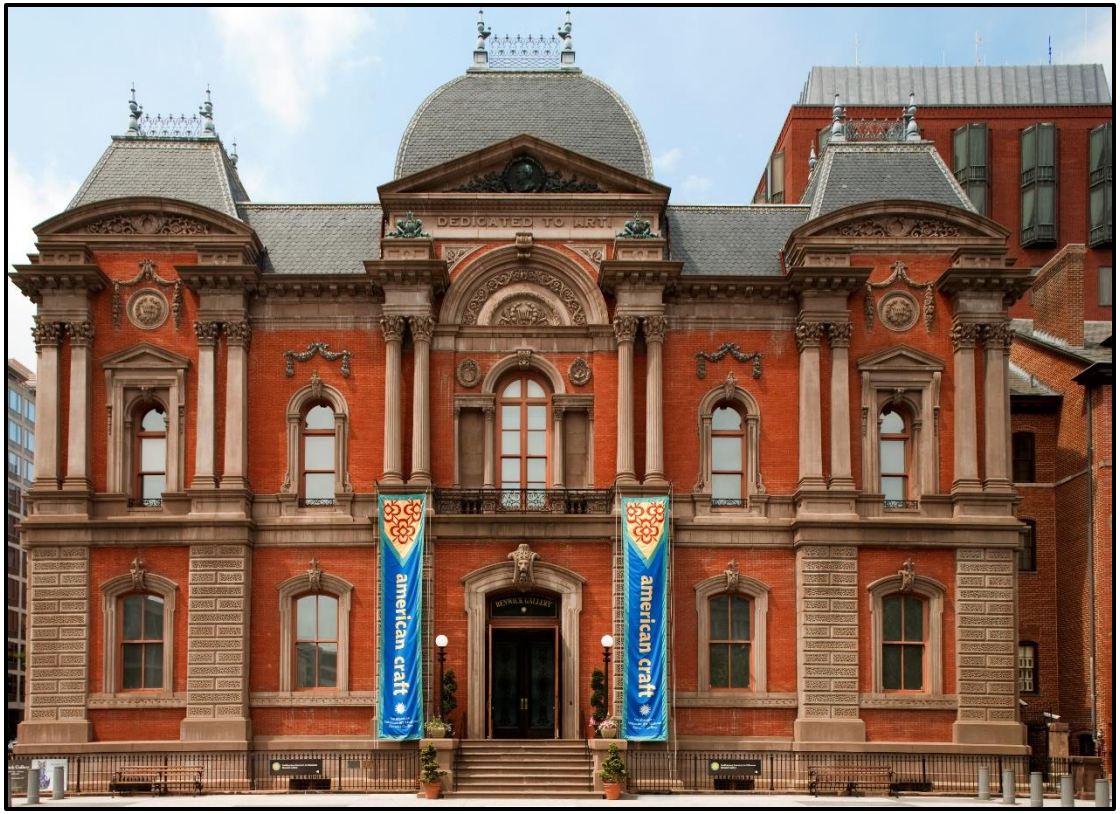
Visiting the Renwick Gallery



MORNING AT THE MUSEUM
Smithsonian Institution

SAAM Smithsonian American Art Museum

What is the Renwick Gallery?

The Renwick Gallery is a museum in Washington, D.C. The Renwick is a part of the Smithsonian Institution, which is a group of museums.

Arrival

To enter the Renwick, visitors will walk up stairs to get to the front door.

If visitors do not want to walk up the stairs, there is a second entrance on the side of the building with a ramp.

Security Check

When visitors enter the Renwick, a security officer may ask to check inside visitor's bags to make sure everything is okay.

Getting Around the Museum

The Renwick has two floors. Visitors can take the elevator or use the stairs to get the different floors.

Bathrooms

The Renwick has bathrooms on both floors of the museum.

There are also water fountains outside of the bathrooms.

Keeping Art Safe

It is important to keep art safe so others can enjoy it too.

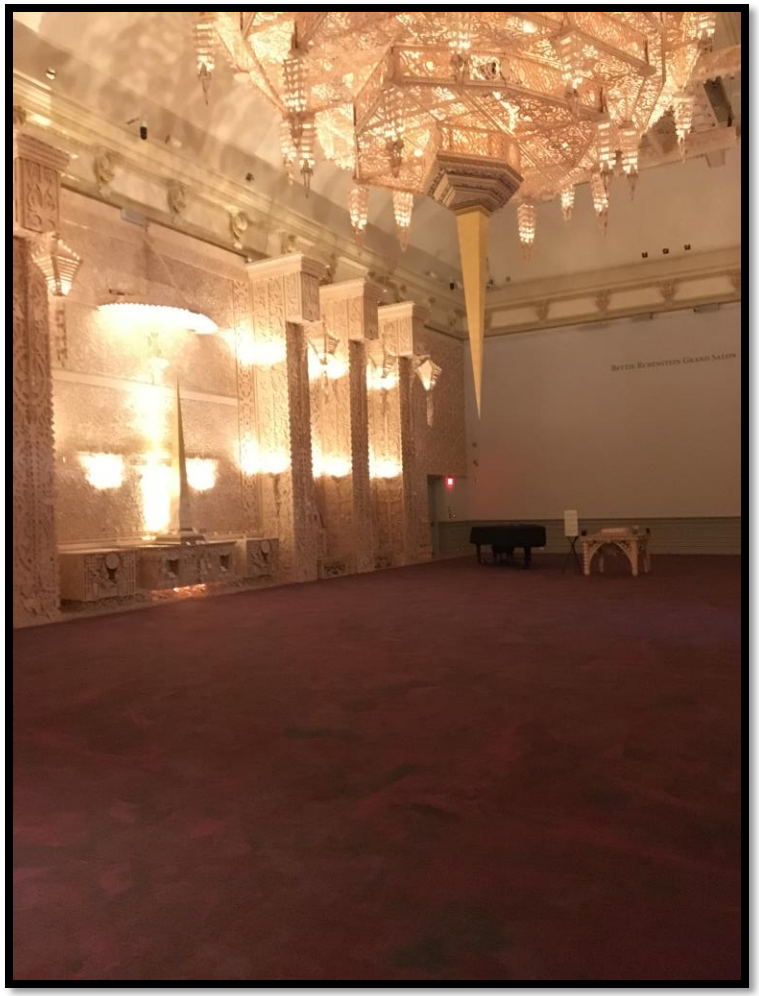
There are silver boxes on the ground around art to show visitors where they should be.

There are also signs to remind visitors not to touch.

Second Floor

On the second floor of the Renwick, there are more exhibitions.

Visitors can see the Grand Salon, and galleries with the permanent collection.



Things to Remember

Visitors can see many things at the Renwick Gallery.

There are two floors to explore at the Renwick.

It is important to keep the art safe so others can enjoy it.

Visitors will have fun at the Renwick Gallery of art!